AUGUST 7th 2023

Where's The Summer?

While the rain may have decided to grace us with its sodden presence rather more than we'd like, we're not letting it dampen our spirits. We might not have control over the weather, but we do have control over which delightful beverages we choose to savour.

And let's not forget, fellow beer enthusiasts, that every cloud has a silver lining, and while it might seem like the rain is conspiring against us, the summer weather is actually setting the stage for a remarkable comeback.

Here's to a future filled with bright skies, cold beers, and the kind of moments that remind us why we love this community so much. Embrace the rain, soak up the good vibes, and let's toast to a spectacular back end of summer.

Cheers, here's to August, a month of endless possibilities and hoppy adventures!

A Pint Of Beer No Longer Affordable For Most

It must be a slow-news week, as the Morning Advertiser have trotted out another price-of-a-pint article, this time based around a CAMRA commissioned research showing that only one in ten Brits now think that a pint is "affordable".

Taproom Review

STEVE JAMES
GUEST WRITER

Cullach Brewing Taproom

50 Princes Street, Perth, Tayside, Scotland PH2 8LJ

We recently spent a few days touring in and around Perth, Scotland. Just around the corner from our hotel, in Princes Street, we came across the taproom for Cullach Brewing.

Cullach Brewing was established by Will Bond in May 2019. He moved to Perth shortly afterwards in December of that year, when he opened the brewery taproom. Will brews beers "which people like to drink". The on-site brewery has a capacity of 10 Hectolitres and the taproom provides comfortable settees and tables and chairs to sample his beers.

At the time of our visit, four Cullach beers were on offer – Tayside IPA (4.2%), Reverb American Pale Ale (6%), Dubh Stout (7.3%) and Berry of My Pie Fruited Sour (4.5%). There were also a handful of guest beers from other Scottish micro-breweries.

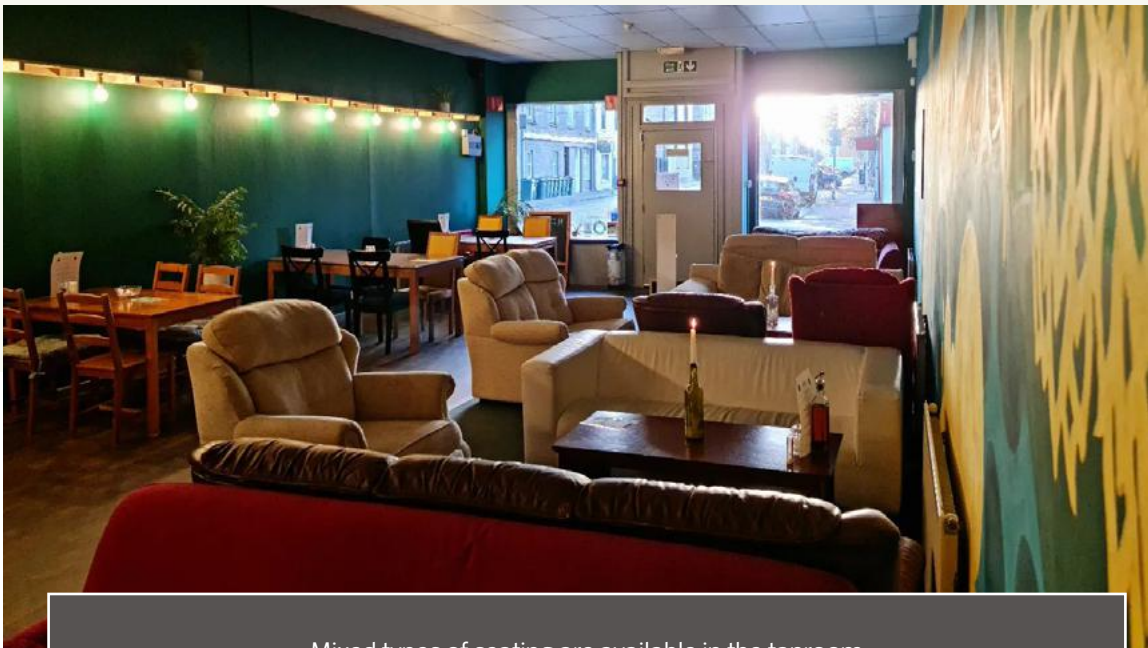

Beer is served from "keykegs", which many see as a type of "real ale". Will offers "paddles" of beers for customers to sample and also dispenses draught beer into "crowlers" (real craft beer in cans, filled to order) for take-away. Cullach beers can also be found in local bottle shops, such as the Craft Beer Bottle Shop in South Methven Street, Perth. On most days, freshly-cooked, artisanal sourdough pizzas are available at the taproom. Merchandise is also available, including branded schooner glasses, zipped hoodies and T-shirts. An extensively stocked fridge offers canned beers from Cullach and other local micro-breweries.

Taproom Review

The taproom is usually open on Wednesdays-Thursdays (1600-2300), Fridays (1600-2400), Saturdays (1200-2400) and Sundays (1200-2100). It's family and dog friendly and cosy, and tables can be booked in advance.

It is to be found in Princes Street, off South Street, just before the railway bridge. It's a short walk from Perth railway and bus stations. Whilst in Perth, you can visit bars at both ends of the spectrum, from Wetherspoon's Capital Asset to Brewdog, as well as the Craft Beer Bottle Shop in South Methven Street.

Mixed types of seating are available in the taproom

Cullach is an important part of the Perth beer scene and the role it plays in helping to produce real ale for the discerning drinker. It's well worth a visit if you are in the Tayside area.
