In Festive Spirits

The TWICB Team were out in force last Friday to attend the London Craft Beer Festival, at Tobacco Dock, Wapping. What a day we all had, drinking our share of over 800 craft beers from around the world. This was the 5th year in a row we have attended and it remains the highlight of the craft beer calendar.

This year was made all the more exciting as we experienced first pours of our collaborative brew with Phantom Brewing. It was literally just 14 days between starting the brew in Reading and pouring it at the festival. Our 7% NEIPA was well received by everyone we talked to, and we can't wait to see it in local bottleshops.

Watch this space for our collaborative beer giveaway!

Cheers,

The TWICB Team

Being A Festival Volunteer in the 1970s

Finally, as we are in the midst of London Beer Festival fortnight, here is a fabulous piece about what it was like to be a volunteer at the outset of the GBBF, in the 1970's. Don't forget to bring your sleeping bag!

Festival Review

STEVE P
CO-FOUNDER TWICB

London Craft Beer Festival

Tobacco Dock, Tobacco Quay, Wapping Lane, London, E1W 2SF

This was the fifth year in a row the TWICB Team had descended on Tobacco Dock for this iconic and keenly anticipated beer festival in Wapping, London.

We arrived early and in high spirits and eagerly awaited the festival opening waiting in the warm sunshine. With over 800 different craft beers on offer from over 100 breweries we were keen to get stuck into the afternoon session, the first of the day.

This time it was all the more exciting as we were anxious to sample the first pours of our collaborative brew with Phantom Brewing. It was literally just 14 days between commencing the brew in Reading and pouring it at the festival.

Tobacco Dock is an event venue based in a Grade I listed tobacco warehouse built in 1812. The LCBF occupies around half of the available building, which is nicely subdivided into different sized rooms, with interconnected walkways and staircases. On the lower level, there are wonderful brick vaults, again divided into rooms and interesting spaces.

Our first port of call was of course to the Phantom Brewing stand to taste our collaborative beer that Rob and Steve helped brew a fortnight earlier. The beer was called, "Tell me About Your Beer Journey" and anybody who listens to Rob's Podcast all know why! This 7% NEIPA tasted great and we couldn't resist having several glasses to savour it.

The place was buzzing with excited beer drinkers throughout the large venue as we spread out to enjoy the delights of the festival. The promoters WE Are Beer had cleverly arranged an app which listed all the beers, so our beer drinking day could be planned with military precision. However after several hours of drinking we found ourselves going with the flow and picking beers at random as we chatted to brewers, and fellow drinkers and absorbed the atmosphere.

A bustling venue but plenty of room for everyone

Culinary delights were not in short supply either, as eight different street food vendors offered an array of delectable options. From pizzas and burgers to seafood, chicken, pastas, and Greek dishes, attendees were treated to an assortment of flavours that harmonised with the diverse beer selection.

In a year awash with craft beer festivals, this one unquestionably rose to the top. Its unique blend of historical setting, curated beverages, and convivial atmosphere set it apart.

As the festival concluded, attendees departed with a shared sentiment: an eager anticipation for next August when they could once again converge at this exceptional event to raise their glasses in collective celebration.

Cheers!
