Dedication To Duty

This week, our intrepid explorer, Rob, went on a captivating adventure.

Venturing to Disruption Is Brewing in Camberley, Rob not only captured the essence of the brewery in a live podcast but also indulged in sampling their carefully crafted beers. Following his visit, he made his way on to the grand opening of Indie Rabble's new taproom in Windsor, immersing himself in the vibrant atmosphere and savouring the array of brews on offer.

Rob's thirst for exceptional brews was not yet quenched, however, as on Friday, he continued his quest by descending upon Phantom Brewing's taproom, The Haunt. Here, he played a pivotal role in relishing the final drops from the keg of our collaborative masterpiece, 'Tell Me About Your Beer Journey'. Kudos to Rob for his unwavering dedication!

Keep an eye out for our unique creation gracing the shelves of select bottle shops near you. Phantom Brewing will also be pouring our beer at Rivington Farm Trip at the end of the month if anyone is lucky enough to be going.

Cheers, The TWICB Team

Taproom Review

ROB C
CO-FOUNDER TWICB

Indie Rabble Taproom

Arch 27, The Arches, Alma Road, Windsor, Berkshire

How many Taprooms does it take to make a Beer Mile?

This question is not as simple as it sounds, as it also depends on a number of auxiliary factors, including the number of paces from the nearest public transport (ideally a train station), quality of the beer on offer (probably best expressed by overall Untappd Brewery ratings), cachet of the location in question and finally, and most difficult of all to express in mathematical notation, one needs to calculate how welcoming, and general wonderful, are the sum total of the Taprooms in question?

Having considered all of the above factors, and having attended the soft opening of the shiny new Indie Rabble Taproom last week, your correspondent can officially declare that the Windsor Beer Mile is well and truly open for business!

Indie Rabble has opened in the arch next door from the fabulous Two Flints, and less than 600 yards from Windsor & Eton Brewery Taproom, who sit at the other end of the "Mile".

Indie Rabble is the newest project for Dave and Naomi Hayward, owners of the A Hoppy Place Bottleshops and Taprooms! This time they have partnered with head brewer Alex Rowlands and operations guru Alison Steele.

Both Indie Rabble and Two Flints are less than 150 paces from the platform of Windsor & Eton Central Station (assuming that you descend the steps two at a time, because after all, you are on your way to a Taproom) Standing out front, there is a superb view of the western end of Windsor Castle, (although I haven't yet attended at sunrise on the Spring Equinox, which is when legend-has-it the castle shadow will favour the beer mile)

The Indie Rabble Taproom has been decorated in Naomi's brilliant signature fantasy-styling, along somewhat similar lines to the Maidenhead branch of A Hoppy Place.

The taproom features 12 keg taps and two cask lines. For the opening weekend, these were populated with eight launch collab brews, featuring partnerships with some of the UK's leading lights including Pomona Island, Utopian and Tartarus, as well as some well-selected guest beers. One of the cask pumps was dispensing Jaipur, and Dave is committed to maintaining two top notch cask beers at all times.

By the time you read this, the Indie Rabble Brewkit will have begun to be delivered, and Alex expects to be brewing in the arch by early September.

As is the way with Craft Beer, there is a close sense of partnership with next-door neighbours Two Flints, which will see them sharing food truck bookings, as well as a large area of outdoor seating in front of both venues.

Both Indie Rabble and Two Flints will be open 4-10pm on Thursday, 12-10.30pm on Friday and Saturday, and 12-8pm on Sunday.

Anyone living in, or visiting the Thames Valley should now be checking their diaries and the train timetables, to schedule a lazy afternoon/evening enjoying the delights of the Windsor Beer Mile in the near future!
