Not So Intelligent?

All the talk these days seems to be about the advent of Artificial Intelligence, and whether or not it offers great advantages, or is something we should be concerned about. One of these concerns is the ability of AI to clone things, including people's identities. In the wrong hands this could obviously be a danger, but I would imagine appropriate safeguards would be in place.

I do, however, have a concern over more mundane areas of intelligence. Before penning this intro I asked Google if there was anything memorable about today's date (there was nothing of note other than it is 'Save the Frogs Day' and historically it was the day in 357 that Constantius II visited Rome for his first and only visit. You might not have known that!)

There was another response from Google - attributed to AI - which started by telling me that the 28th April 2025 was a Tuesday!

So despite its lauded super intelligence, AI doesn't even seem to know what day it is!

Cheers.

Modest Rise of Pub Numbers

Let's start this week with a glimmer of good news regarding pub numbers, which shows that there has been a modest rise in the numbers of community pubs, food pubs and high street pubs in the year to March 2025, according to the Hospitality Market Monitor.

London's Roughest Pub Crawl!

This one is a bit random! We couldn't resist linking to an article in the Daily Star, which saw them send two journalists out on London's roughest pub crawl!

How Much!?

Now this is a really good read! It is easy to underestimate the Pub Curmudgeon, but he is actually a really perceptive observer and commentator on the UK pub scene. This week he takes a close look at pub pricing, in a market where apparently the average Brit now drinks only about 1.25 pints per week in a pub. (Ahem...!!)

German Beer Consumption on the Wane

Finally, here is some good news! It turns out that general reverence for German beer has significantly declined in the past decade. Consumption of German beer is down 6% Worldwide in the decade to 2024, with consumption in Germany itself down 15%. Look, German beers are fine, but please don't tell us that a Pilsner or a Helles can be compared to a well-brewed NEIPA or a BA Imperial Stout!

Platform 2

Tynemouth, North Shields NE30 4RE

Nestled within the charming Tynemouth Metro Station in North Shields, just a short ride from Newcastle, Platform 2 is a taproom that effortlessly blends heritage with modern hospitality.

Once a humble station waiting room and later a coffee house, this bar has been tastefully reimaged into a buzzing craft beer haven – and it's no surprise it's a local favourite.

The vibe here is warm and welcoming, thanks to its clever mix of old and new. Think exposed red brick walls, rustic wooden floors, towering ceilings with industrial-style pendant lamps, and big windows that flood the space with natural light. It's one rectangular room with a great flow – perimeter seating hugs the edges while a good number of wooden tables fill the centre. It's stylish but unpretentious, the kind of place where you can just as easily enjoy a quiet pint or a lively catch-up with friend

Craft Bar Review

Platform 2 boasts an impressive selection behind the bar: four cask ales, nine keg taps, a still cider, and a wide variety of wines, spirits, and canned craft beers (available to drink in or take away). During our visit, we sampled standouts like Cloudwater's Fifty Summers Pale Ale, Polly's Brew Co's Gruxle Pale Ale, and Vault City's Screwball Sour. Every pour was fresh and full of flavour – the lineup clearly curated with care.

Adding to the appeal are some lovely extras: a free vintage-style jukebox playing eclectic tunes, a stack of board games for relaxed afternoons, and a spacious outdoor drinking area right on the station concourse. Live music nights and big-screen sport screenings keep the calendar busy, and there's always a buzz about the place – it can get noisy, but in that infectious, community-pub kind of way.

The staff are a real asset too – friendly, knowledgeable, and always happy to chat through what's on tap. And being directly on the Metro line means you're never far from home, making it an ideal pre- or post-journey pit stop.

Craft Bar Review

Open seven days a week from 3pm (noon on weekends), Platform 2 is everything you could want in a modern taproom with a historic twist. Great beer, great atmosphere, and a truly unique location. Highly recommended.

Hop of the Week

Chinook

Chinook Hops: The Piney Powerhouse of American Craft Beer

When it comes to bold, aromatic, and character-rich hops, Chinook stands tall as one of the key players in American craft brewing. Developed in the 1980s as part of a USDA breeding program, Chinook has grown from a utility bittering hop into a darling of the craft beer world, celebrated for its unique flavour profile and versatility.

Origins and Background

Chinook was released in 1985, bred from a cross between Petham Golding and a USDA male plant. Originally intended for high alpha acid bittering in American-style ales, it quickly caught the attention of craft brewers looking to add complexity to their hop-forward creations.

Named after the Chinook people of the Pacific Northwest and the powerful winds that sweep through the Columbia River Gorge, this hop is deeply rooted in the identity of American brewing.

Aroma and Flavour Profile

Chinook is known for its spicy, piney, and resinous characteristics, often accompanied by notes of grapefruit, earthy herbs, and smoky wood. In higher concentrations or when used late in the boil or for dry hopping, it can take on a bold citrus edge with hints of dank, almost catty pungency – a flavour profile some love for its punchy presence. notes or showcase a drier, wine-like character.

Aroma: Pine, grapefruit, spice, earth

Flavour: Resinous bitterness, citrus zest, subtle floral notes

Alpha Acid Range: Typically 12%–14% – ideal for bittering

Hop of the week: CHINOOK

Brewing Applications

Chinook is a true dual-purpose hop. While it began as a bittering hop thanks to its high alpha acid content, its aromatic punch has made it a star in late additions and dry hopping.

Popular uses:

IPAs and Double IPAs – Brings sharp bitterness and complex pine-citrus aromas.

American Pale Ales – Adds depth and crisp edge.

Stouts and Porters – The pine and spice can complement roasted malts beautifully.

Winter ales and Barleywines – Holds its own against richer malt backbones.

Because of its bold flavour, Chinook is often used in combination with other hops like Cascade, Centennial, Simcoe, and Citra to balance its intensity and bring out complementary citrus or tropical fruit notes.

Hop of the week: CHINOOK

Growing and Availability

Chinook hops thrive in the Pacific Northwest, particularly in Washington and Oregon, but have also found homes in other hop-growing regions globally. They are relatively easy to grow for homebrewers, known for their high yield and disease resistance.

As craft brewing has surged, so has demand for Chinook, both in the U.S. and internationally. It's available as whole leaf, pellet, and even in cryo hop format for brewers seeking a more concentrated form.

Conclusion

Chinook is not for the faint of palate. It's bold, brash, and undeniably charismatic – a hop that brings a forest full of flavour to every glass. Whether you're crafting a piney IPA, a smoky stout, or experimenting with a new hop-forward style, Chinook delivers a memorable punch that defines many modern American beers.

So next time you crack open a West Coast IPA and get a whiff of pine forests and grapefruit rinds, raise a toast to Chinook – the hop that brings the wilderness to your pint.

Beer Name of the Week

Pier Pressure

By Docks Beers

Brewed in the neighbourhood of Cleethorpes Pier, this New England IPA is all about a luxuriously soft, pillowy body bursting with flavour. Think juicy waves of ripe passion fruit, melon, and citrus zest, with a subtle swirl of herbal notes and a touch of apricot and peach for extra depth.
